CHORUS GIRLS GO TO COURT FOR BACK PAY

Speed Demons' Revue on Rocks After Run on Circuit of Nearby Village Theater

THERE apparently comes a time in the life of many show managers a time when liabilities multiply too rapidly for the assets, which gradually reduce themselves to stage settings, costumes and other bric-a-brac.

Chorus girls on such occasions are prone to become their own managers, take the situation in hand, and file the well known proceedings of attachment against these tangible assets until wages are paid.

Wilma Mitchell, San Antonio, Texas, and Elmer Moore, Detroit whom the customers of the Orpheum theater here have seen much of lately in Speed Demons Revue and who have rather unsuccessfully applied to their managers for wages, have taken the course of many of their predecessors both in fact and fiction, and have attached the show's property. Even speed demons must eat, you know.

Proceedings were filed in municipal court yesterday, which if they materialize, will net these two chorines $30 back pay.

"Three days pay for the two of us," the girls explained at Hotel Marion, where they have

JURY FINDS EMMONS GUILTY, FINED $100

Youth Who Figured in Auto Accident Convicted of Driving While Intoxicated

Ralph Emmons, 19, of 562 Avondale av., was found guilty of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor by a jury in municipal court Saturday afternoon. Emmons was fined $100 and costs and his driving rights were revoked for six months, in sentence pronounced by Judge William R. Martin.

The jury deliberated two hours and 46 minutes after being charged by Judge Martin. The case was presented to the jury by attorneys and more than half a dozen witnesses Saturday morning, both the state and defense resting their cases at noon. Following an adjournment for lunch, the jury was charged and went into deliberation.

Emmons was charged with driving while intoxicated following a wreck on South Prospect st. on Nov. 24 in which the automobile he was driving collided head-on with a sedan belonging to and driven by Miller Sweeney, 258 Seffner av.

Emmons spent several weeks in the hospital following the accident suffering with what was feared to be a fractured skull. He recently recovered sufficiently to stand trial to the charge placed against him. Ray Wiser, a companion with Emmons on the night of the wreck, did not appear in court during the trial.

City Solicitor Carter Patton and City Prosecutor John Wisemann represented the state in the prosecution. The law firm of Carbart & Warner represented Emmons.

MARION'S COLD WAVE PASSES

Mercury Climbs 20 Degrees from Low Level of Saturday Morning

SNOW, WARMER TONIGHT

25 Die as Sub-Zero Weather Sweeps States in Middle West

While reports of death and suffering from the extreme cold were being received here today, Marion was rapidly recovering from the worst cold wave in 12 years which swept this city Saturday morning between 7 and 10 o'clock.

Last night found the mercury as low as 8 degrees above zero, but the bitterness of this cold was modified by the fact that it was 20 degrees higher than Saturday's wave.

Snow and not quite so cold tonight is the official forecast for Marion and vicinity issued today. More moderate temperatures are predicted for this vicinity in spite of the fact that another cold blizzard was rolling through western states today, threatening a repetition of Friday night and Saturday's extreme temperatures.

Out in the west along the great divide the storm last night was a roaring blizzard that stalled trains and almost paralyzed traffic and communication.

Surveys of the toll in lives taken by the record cold wave that has swept the middle west and the great plains region indicate that at least 25 persons died from exposure in the sub-zero blast.

Most of the victims died in the plains states where temperatures of 50 degrees below zero existed and mountainous drifts of snow destroyed communications and prevented relief.

Zero and sub-zero temperatures still held the great plains region in their grip following the record-smashing cold of Friday and Saturday that took its toll in human lives, stock losses and property damage. Two more deaths in the Chicago area brought the toll of the week-end storm to five dead.

Although the latest storm is scheduled to settle through the Illinois and Indiana region today, C. A. Donnel, government weather forecaster here said its fury would not doubt be spent.

In the Vincennes, Ind., flood area rescue workers continued their desperate efforts today to reach marooned farmers and their families with food and warm clothing. Two aviators after a flight over the stricken area reported that every house on high ground was literally jammed with families made homeless by the flood waters from the Wabash river.

Nearly 5,000 residents in and about Newport, Ark., are endangered by flood waters from the White River.

WOMAN IS ON TRIAL IN HUSBAND'S DEATH

Court Machinery Fails To Halt After Convicting Howard Dorr

CHICAGO, Jan. 20 — Genevieve O'Brien, wife of William J. O'Brien, for whose murder Samuel Howard Dorr was found guilty and sentenced to life imprisonment Saturday night, went on trial here today for that same murder.

The state contends Genevieve plotted with Dorr to kill O'Brien to obtain his insurance.

Defense attorneys, different from those who defended Dorr, relentlessly demanded an immediate trial for the expectant mother although Judge Harry B. Miller and Assistant State's Attorneys Hardy Grubbaum and Walter Butler were weary from 16 days of hard legal wrangling that ended Saturday night.

A jury deliberated slightly more than three hours before it deemed upon Dorr's guilt and punishment.

O'Brien was shot to death in his apartment Nov. 20 after he was said to have discovered Dorr in his home with his wife.

Tri-Motored Craft Explodes as Pilot Attempts Landing After Engines Die; Wheel of Plane Strikes Hole, Ship Upsets

EYE-WITNESSES UNABLE TO GIVE AID

Forced To Stand by and See Passengers Die; Lindbergh Leads Group in Investigation of Accident; Occurs at San Clemente, Calif.

SAN CLEMENTE, Cal., Jan. 20—Around the twisted, flame-scarred skeleton of what was once a graceful air liner investigators led by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today were trying and locate the trouble that plunged the giant plane to earth in flames killing its 16 occupants.

Bearing 14 holiday pleasure seekers the tri-motored plane soared away from Agua Caliente, Mex., race track at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and swung northward toward Los Angeles under leaden low-hanging clouds.

Dusk had descended as Pilot Harold Russell guided the plane along the coastline. Between Oceanside and San Clemente persons on the ground were attracted when the three powerful Wasp motors began to sputter and miss.

The plane swung inland, seeking a landing place as the motors died. Pilot Russell put the plane into a glide that for an instant seemed to spectators would prove a perfect landing. The wheels touched the rain soaked earth and the plane lurched its nose in the ground and overturned.

Flash and Explosion

There was a blinding flash followed by the roar of an explosion and a second later the air liner was a mass of flames, its 16 occupants trapped in the blazing fuselage.

One of the landing wheels had caught in a chuck-hole. The ship buckled. A gasoline wing tank apparently split open, drenching the interior of the all-metal cabin with fuel. An unknown cause ignited the gasoline and in an instant the cabin was a blazing charnel.

Jets of flame rocketed from every window and from crevices in the metal sheathing. Passersby on the coast highway three-quarters of a mile to the west, halted their cars and ran to the scene. They found a monster airplane still glowing and jetting flame and no living survivor.

Beyond Recognition

The crash piled the occupants in the front of the ship as the plane drove its nose into the soft earth. All but three of the occupants who were thrown clear were burned beyond recognition. Investigators expressed the fear that some of the bodies may never be positively identified.

Beside two pilots eight women and six men died in the burning ship. A boy injured today by Maddox officials declared the following were aboard:

Edward J. Bowen, president of the Union Pipe and Tank Co., Los Angeles.

Mrs. Edward J. Bowen, his wife, prominent society woman.

W. W. Parks, Los Angeles real estate dealer of Monrovia, Cal.

Mrs. Richard Canfield, wife of a prominent Los Angeles attorney.

Mrs. Ada Glover, her mother.

Edward J. Smith, Los Angeles business man.

Miss Frances Jamieson, Los Angeles.

Sees Horror of Crash

Eye Witness to Plane Disaster Tells of Being Unable To Rescue Victims

SAN CLEMENTE, Cal., Jan. 20—Stories that brought home the horror and grim tragedy which marked the deaths of 16 persons in the blazing fuselage of the T. A. T. Maddux tri-motored plane that crashed here were told today by witnesses to the catastrophe.

One motorist who stopped his automobile as the faltering plane swung toward its emergency landing place told his story to Robert Hanson, son of Ole Hanson, San Clemente realtor. His name could not be obtained.

"The motor seemed to miss as the plane came flying along beneath low clouds," he told Hanson. "The motor sputtered for some distance then seemed to catch hold only to falter again.

"The roar of the plane came closer as the pilot fought a safe spot to land. As he drew closer the motor died.

"IT looked as though it was a perfect landing as the plane swooped down gracefully to the ranch field. All three motors were dead.

"The field must have been soggy and muddy from the drizzly rain. The landing gear seemed to touch the ground—but with a mighty force.

"The ship overturned and there was a fearful explosion. Before any of the occupants could escape they were all dead—either killed by the force of the landing or burned to death. Clothing burned almost completely from all the bodies."

Lieut. Virgil Westbrook, United States army flier who rushed to the scene as soon as news of the

WEDNESDAY NIGHT IS ONLY OPEN DATE ON ATHLETIC PROGRAM

Shovels, Harding, Y-Indus and Saints Feature Cage Bill

BY KARL R. McELROY

WHATTLE I be, groaned the ardent Marion sport fan this morning as he glanced over the sport schedule that faces him the coming week. And his wife, better known as the athletic widow because she fails to share her husband's enthusiasm for sports prepared for another week of bridge and social affairs for John would only be home on Wednesday night. That is, if he decided to take in everything.

Tonight the Eagles will open the winter boxing season with a 10-round card in their hall on West Center st. And John would not miss that for anything in the world for this Leo Meredith the Toledo assassin is to meet Leo Genet of Barberton. Genet is not the only one this Meredith kid is to meet, thinks John The fightin' Toledoan may meet his Waterloo, whoever that happens to be. It will be an eight-round battle, according to the advance notices, and a corkin' good one at that. In addition the fans will be treated to 22-rounds of other bouts featuring Marion, Toledo and Barberton fighters.

Tuesday night will be the Sunday School league games at the Y. M. C. A. Both the Intermediate and Senior divisions will play. Some close games are anticipated and most of the dopesters would not be surprised to see a change in the standings.

The schedule follows:

Senior: First Presbyterian vs. United Brethren, Waldo vs. Trinity Baptist, Christian No. 1 vs. Christian No. 2, Epworth vs. Calvary.

Intermediate: Calvary vs. Epworth No. 1, Trinity Baptist vs. Presbyterian, Christian vs. Epworth No. 2.

Wednesday night will give him a chance to catch his wind before starting a round of basketball that will carry him over a goodly portion of this district.

The Steam Shovel pro cagers will stack up against stiff opposition Thursday night at the Shovel gym where they will meet the Rochester Oldsmobiles. The Rochester club is one of the outstanding New York teams featuring many former American league players.

Many fans will want to see a good North Central Ohio league battle. There is one at Bucyrus Thursday night with Mansfield furnishing the Wittenmen opposition. Bucyrus and Mansfield are rated as the two strongest teams in the league. The Murphymen have not been defeated.

Three games are on the card Friday night. Only one of them—Y-Indus vs. Crestline—will be on the home schedule. Harding will take a breather playing at Crestline. St. Mary's will be in for a hard battle at Lima where it will meet the strong, St. John's quintet. The Y-Indus-Crestline battle is scheduled on the Y. M. C. A. court.

Harding and the Y-Indus quints will play their second game of the week Saturday night. The Presidents meet Delaware in Star auditorium while the Y five journeys to Tiffin where it plays the Heidelberg Reserve team in a preliminary tilt.

And on Sunday it will be sleep 'til noon.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients, naming them Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, causing a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, head aches, a listless no-good feeling all out of sorts, inactive bowels, take one of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.—Adv.

SPRINGFIELD FALLS BEFORE ST. MARY'S

Playing of Gorsuch, Kelly and Chuck Fye Features 18-to-17 Victory Over Central Five

ST. MARY'S band of basket tossers Saturday night chalked up their fourth straight victory by taking a close decision from Central Catholic at Springfield, 18 to 17.

The fact that Marion was able to score four free throws marked the difference between victory and defeat. The locals were outscored on the number of baskets but overcame the difference with four goal. The Saints counted seven field goals while Springfield was scoring eight. Four free throws shot by the Marion quintet clinched the game.

Gorsuch with the high score of the game with 10 points. Kelly scored seven. The floor work of Chuck Fye was one of the features of the fray.

F. Garn, the Springfield center, topped his team in scoring with six points. Cashin and Cast were next in line with four points.

It was a hard-fought battle all the way through. The locals were in the lead most of the time but were never safe. At the half the count stood 10 to 6.

CINCY AND WOOSTER BEST OF OHIO FIVES

Ohio Wesleyan in Second Place of Buckeye Conference Standings

BY JOSEPH K. RUKENBROD

COLUMBUS, Jan. 20—With the end of the first half of the 1930 basketball season rapidly approaching, Cincinnati and Wooster are being proclaimed as the best quintets in the state and the leading contenders of their respective leagues, the Buckeye and Ohio conferences.

The Cincinnati Bearcats, under the tutelage of Coach Frank Rice, seemed destined to win or share the Buckeye title for the fifth consecutive time. With two wins to their credit, the Queen City five turned back Miami at Oxford Saturday night to win its third consecutive victory, by a 37-27 score. Cincinnati is the only undefeated team in the league.

Ohio Wesleyan and Wittenberg have only one set-back to their discredit. Both teams were victorious in their week-end games. The Bishops decisively defeated Denison, 47 to 26, Saturday night, and the Lutherans sprang a surprise by whipping the highly-touted Ohio Bobcats, 31 to 19, Friday night.

By next Saturday night, Cincinnati will have faced every team in the conference. The Bearcats are scheduled to meet Wittenberg Tuesday night and Ohio university Saturday. They will be fairly sure of the championship if they can trounce both of their opponents this week.

Buckeye conference championship standing.

SHIRES WILL APPEAR IN CLEVELAND RING

But He Will Not Fight After Orders Received from Judge Landis

CHICAGO, Jan. 20—Lost to his boxing art forever by request of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's high commissioner, Charles Arthur Shires today was on his way to Cleveland where he will appear in the ring tonight, but not as a fighter.

"Whatsman" boarded a train here last night for Ohio with the "advice" of Commissioner Landis still revolving in his head.

The White Sox first baseman has donated his box office magnetism to the benefit show being held for the family of Ray Campbell, boxing critic who died recently.

Shires intends to visit his family in Italy, Tex., after his visit to Cleveland, he said. The prodigal announced his retirement from the ring Saturday after a session with Commissioner Landis here in which the baseball czar outlined his views on baseball players who select the prize ring as a harmstorming field.

Johnston Ranked as One of Great Fight Managers

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK Jan 20—Some deny with a frown that the man is insured against failure by an unknown multitude; others ignore the matter and merely to smile very knowingly. But whether fact or fancy dictate these contrasting opinions the point remains unmistakable. James J. Johnston has become the most powerful manager the sport of boxing ever knew, greater than Kearns, Billy Delaney, James A. Brady, Madison, Billy Gibson, Tom Jones, Billy Nolan.

They were great because, mostly, they were able to get what they wanted. Johnston does even better than that. It seems he never gets what he doesn't want.

There is supposed to be a story behind that, a story that tells of secret liaisons, and hows poems of a kindred strain. It may be told some time but not by me. My rubber heels are all worn down and dark glasses don't match my complexion, which is praetorially alabaster.

All I know is that Johnston, who in the old days sold a brought in a winner, either as a promoter or manager, has taken two losers during recent years and made them win for him in a great, big way. One of them was Mike McTigue, a broken down former champion who couldn't beat anybody. Johnston had him winning from heavyweights and the thing wound up by McTigue being voted back into the very title he formerly had held. The other Johnston miracle is Phil Scott, the English heavyweight.

One year ago, Philip was presumed to be a wash up. Since then, he has beaten Campolo and won on a foul from Von Porat, neither of whom is a ranking heavyweight. Presto! Nothing up the sleeve but a lot of linen. Scott is declared into the semi-finals of the heavyweight championship tourney. Philip wanted to get rid of Johnston a year ago. He couldn't then. He wouldn't now.

What manner of man is this Aladdin of boxing, who can rub the washing lamp and make the little genii do his will? An insignificant man in some ways, typical of Broadway with his spats and the inevitable derby corked over one ear. He has the ready tongue of Broadway, too, and its patter is his patter—whimsical, ironic, assured.

A good hater, one might think he was almost friendless. Yet it is his friends who are supposed to have made him what he is. The father of a large family and a devoted parent, he yet seems to be always on or near Broadway. A perennial "diz," he is far from unknown to the night life of the town.

Perhaps his enemies outnumbered his friends, although this is a controversial point. Just how much he knows about boxing also is debatable. What he knows of politics is not. He is a consummate politician. He has been around boxing long enough to know all there is and I believe there is little he doesn't know about it. He used to fight himself in the old days but promptly discovered that the men who did the actual fighting then was in a rube's racket. There was nothing unsmart about this conclusion.

A stranger man? Yes, often. But an unsmart man? Almost never.

WISCONSIN BATTLING FOR SECOND PLACE

Indiana Pulls Surprise of Last Week by Trimming Purdue Quint

CHICAGO, Jan. 20—Conceded only an outside chance of keeping up with the Big Nine leaders last week, Wisconsin's basketball five today finds itself in a position to capture an undisputed second place in the league race.

With two consecutive victories one Saturday night over the Illinois ace, the Badgers tonight face Chicago. The strong Illini team fell before a 41 to 9 score in a low score game that was played "safety first" throughout.

Michigan, however, will have to defeat Indiana at Ann Arbor tonight to boost the Badgers into that second place. The Hoosiers, with their new lease on life and a winning streak now a habit, will prove a tough team for Michigan to down this evening.

After tripping over a few practice teams before the conference tournament began, Indiana brushed up on its offensive and is now in a tie for first honors with Purdue.

Saturday night Indiana stepped out and whipped Purdue by a 40 to 32 score just by way of showing the tiedemakers the state of Indiana possesses two Big Nine teams of championship calibre.

In the other game Saturday the Calvary quintet went into a tie with the Epworth Midgets by winning a one-sided game, 27 to 12.

VAN WERT SWAMPED BY Y-INDUS CAGERS

Gillis Scores 27 Points To Lead Marion Quintet to One-Sided Victory by 73-27 Score

BASKETBALL teams have nights on which they are "on." Then there are other nights when they can't score a single basket. The Marion Y-Indus cagers last couldn't miss Saturday night and as a result walloped the representative Y. M. C. A. quintet of Van Wert, 73 to 27.

There wasn't much of a story connected with the game. It was too much of a one sided affair. The locals jumped into an early lead and were never in the least danger of being headed.

There wasn't much of a story connected with the game. It was too much of a one sided affair. The locals jumped into an early lead and were never in the least danger of being headed.

At the end of the first period the score stood 23 to 2 and at the half the locals had slowed down somewhat and the score stood 29 to 9. The old zip was there in the third and final periods. At the three-quarters mark the score was 55 to 11.

Every man on the Marion team scored at least one basket. Gillis had one of those nights when he just couldn't miss. He scored 27 points from 12 field goals and a free try to lead the scoring. Slack scored 7 points and Cline 16 for the locals.

Greenwald, Van Wert forward, was high for the visitors with eight points. Wilkinson and Drury each scored 9 points.

WELL, OF ALL THINGS— MRS. MORTIMER CLAMBY!! ARE YOU THE OWNER OF ROADSIDE TEA ROOM?
THIS IS A SURPRISE, MR. CASPER! YOU'RE THE LAST PERSON I EVER EXPECTED TO SEE HERE!

REPORTS ARE BEARISH

Brokerage Houses Fail in Efforts To Get Line on 1930 Business

BY W. S. COUSINS
Marion Star Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 20—The stock market sagged and waddled through another session today, with speculative interest maintained in only a few of the best known specialties. Transactions in the two hours were 425,000 shares against 340,000 in the same period on Saturday. Net price changes were if anything slightly lower. Early pressure against the steel corporation and U. S. Steel issues moderately lower, but the list showed no disposition to follow their slender successes and dropped with small profits.

Most of the business reports of the week referred to the November and December slump in steel, automobile manufacturing and building etc., and the water over the dam as far as the stock market was concerned. The street is now attempting to get a line on the 1930 business outlook from the extremely dull markets of today, the last week or two indicating that those efforts have thus far been unsuccessful.

Brokerage houses reported a turnover of their traders for the warm climate of the Florida beaches. Some of the Wall Street bears have taken up their residence in these southern playgrounds and may have taken occasional pot shots at the market over the wires.

Individual stocks slipped on to lower levels at the opening. Rumors of the formation of another "bull pool" were circulated around Wall Street in Radio and a few other of the old favorites were subjected to a heavy volume of selling orders. Radio dropped back to 36, the lowest price of the move, and U. S. Steel was pushed down to 168, nearly two points below Saturday's close.

With only 340,000 shares turned over in the first half hour, and the ticker notably lagging for short periods after the end of the hour, the market appeared to be again drifting into the doldrums. Most of the current business reports are showing up the extremely bad performances of the industrial corporations in December, a month which in reality started the recession of late 1929.

Review of Last Week's Grain Market

CHICAGO, Jan. 20—Wheat prices continued to decline the past week under the pressure of liquidation and local selling. Argentine offerings depressed prices at Liverpool and there were rumors of calling of Canadian bank loans. Action of the co-operatives kept shorts on tenterhooks and there were sharp rallies, but values were substantially lower at the close of the period.

Near midweek corn broke out of its rut by declining to new low levels and there was consequently a more active trade. Purchases of cash corn were inaugurated by the co-operatives, with a moderate constructive result. Rye was liquidated heavily, but at the close shorts found offers small and rallied the market.

Saturday's closing prices showed wheat 2¾@3⅜c lower compared with the previous week. Corn was 1⅝@ 2½c lower; oats, 1½@1½c down, and rye 1¾@0c off, the March being weakest.

Fear Canadian Sales

The lower trend at Liverpool, where Argentine, Australian and French offers were competing, caused considerable bearish sentiment in the local market. Its effect was augmented by declining prices at Winnipeg, with a gradual closing of the spread between that market and the local range of values.

Reports were current that banks were calling wheat loans, and while these advices were denied, attention was called to the drastic effect on export trade such action might have. The Canadian pool operating under government aid reassured the trade by declaring intentions of continuing its scand-pat policy.

However, whether or not the Canadian interests were to unload wheat on a sweeping scale, the decline in the Chicago-Winnipeg spread caused nervousness among the already discouraged bulls. A drop to an even export basis would be unfavorable for domestic shippers, as foreigners have shown a decided preference for Canadian varieties at competing levels.

Export Is Puzzle

It is still anybody's guess as to the outcome of the puzzling export situation. Broomhall finally reduced his estimate of import requirements 24,000,000 bu. and the demand as yet shows few signs of increasing.

There is still no real measure of the quality that can be expected from Argentine arrivals, and speculators and shippers are watching this angle of the situation carefully.

Generally the trade looks for a two-sided market pending an increase in foreign demand for North American wheats. Sentiment appears to favor the bear side, but shorts are indisposed to press the market at levels close to the farm board loan schedule, even though speculative interests which favor the bull side admittedly are reluctant to buy until clearances increase.

On the whole, corn prices ruled relatively steady, apprehension over flood damage to corn still in the fields and in cribs in nearby territory offsetting a great part of the effects of selling. Purchases here from outside markets would appear to indicate inability to obtain sufficient corn from the country.

FIREARMS QUESTION MAY BE DECIDED

Sam Jones Trial Brings Interesting Point; Claim Him Within Rights

The question of whether a man can legally carry firearms while on his own premises is expected to be one of the main legal points at issue when Sam Jones, colored, of Grand township goes on trial Tuesday in the Marion county court of common pleas on the charge of carrying concealed weapons.

When Jones was arrested at his home he is alleged to have had a revolver in his pocket in addition to a shotgun in his hands. The defense counsel is expected to base its arguments on the contention that Jones with within his legal rights in view of the fact that he was on his own property. It is claimed that he armed himself after going to his home and finding that it had been entered by officers in search of bootleg evidence.

Judge William F. Duncan of Findlay will be the presiding jurist when Jones goes on trial. Duncan is coming here to substitute for Judge Scofield, who is in Findlay presiding at the trial of two young men accused of robbing a bank at Van Lue. The bank robbery trial is expected to last several days.

A divorce case is also on the docket for hearing by Judge Duncan here Tuesday. A number of other cases originally set for hearing today have been postponed until Judge Scofield's return.

been staging for the last several weeks.

A week ago last Saturday the company, which apparently consisted of about nine persons, finished a three-week engagement at the Orpheum theater here, and has been playing in villages around Marion recently. Richwood was the last village to be entertained.

Jack LaMar and Williford Brown appear to be the managers of the show. They are named defendants in the proceedings filed in municipal court yesterday.

According to unofficial reports this morning, it appears that one of the managers intended to make a trip to Columbus to arrange to meet the financial obligations of the troupe. It also appears that he intended to take some of the show property with him, to which at least two of the girls objected.

Their objections became so pertinent, that, Sabbath or no Sabbath, municipal court officials were routed out of their Sunday vacations and the property was attached.

Unless there is a settlement before that time, there will be a hearing on the matter next Monday in municipal

Big lawyers must have cotton growers and their friends have the whip hand, but don't know how to use it.

President Hoover and Postmaster Brown, and the brave, brilliantly able mail pilots, deserve the public's thanks.

At St. Bonaventure College, Olean, N. Y., young "Stewie" Gustafson fought a prize fight with Augie Carlson. It was "a bootleg fight," not authorized by the Amateur Athletic Union, or the New York State prize fighting commission.

It was none the worse for that, neither union's nor commission's approval could justify assault and battery, arranged for amusement.

Gustafson was knocked out in the third round, taken to a hospital and died.

What makes a killing legal in a "civilized" state?

Answer—The fact that the fight is called a boxing match, and arranged, usually, for profit, with politicians sharing it.

THE Irving Trust Co. of New York recently laid the cornerstone of its new building at Number One Wall Street, probably the most valuable piece of land in the world.

In the cornerstone, Lewis K. Pierson, head of the company, deposited a history of that corner for 300 years back, and other documents.

Three hundred years hence, men will be interested chiefly in the fact that above the cornerstone there rose the world's first fifty-story bank building.

Building that structure is a real service to progress. One hundred years hence, entire cities will be housed in one building, all tenants landing on the roofs from flying machines. It will be remembered then that in 1930 bankers had imagination, although a modest fifty-story building will then seem like a modest igloo.

Sailors Eyewitnesses

Two sailors who were eyewitnesses to the crash brought first news of the tragedy to Chief of Policy of Oceanside. They described how the plane hit the ground, bounded and then was transformed into a blazing mass by an explosion that hurled fire and debris skyward.

Chief Copps sped 14 miles to the wreck and there stationed policemen to keep the crowds back. Returning to Oceanside he reported that all were dead within the plane.

San Clemente heard the first flash of the disaster about the same time as Oceanside officials. Dr. Garrett Grant of the San Clemente clinic and hospital sent an ambulance, doctors and nurses. Robert Hanson and Lieut. Virgil Westbrook, a United States army flier, rode with the ambulance. With Chief of Police Forrest Eaton and Sergeant Conner, they raced 10 miles southward to the wreck.

Summons Lindbergh

"The plane was still blazing," said young Hanson. "Three bodies were outside apparently hurled from the cabin by the impact of striking the ground. One body seemed to be under one of the motors. We could see other bodies inside the ship—tragedy I don't know how many there were for they were all dead.

Colonel Lindbergh, technical adviser of the Maddux line, was notified of the crash at San Diego where he was conducting glider flights, summoned by Lieut. H. W. Tomlinson, vice president in charge of operations. Lindbergh today was to join Tomlinson and Chief Engineer William Hughes in a complete investigation of the matter.

Earlier in the day the plane had borne a cargo of passengers from Los Angeles to Agua Caliente race track and had remained there during the day until the passengers were ready to return.

tragedy was flashed, told of standing helplessly by while the victims underwent virtual incineration.

"We could see 11 bodies piled in the blazing cabin," he said. "They must have died when the plane struck.

"It was raining and the ship was kept lower than usual in flight because of the low ceiling. The pilot had been circling for a forced landing place. The spot he chose was a good one—level, apparently safe for a night landing, but muddy.

"It must have hit terribly hard. The wreckage shows it was an angle landing. The wings were sheered completely off the fuselage and the fuselage itself was broken from the plane behind the passenger cabin.

"The clothing and bodies of the forward passengers were ablaze when we arrived. They had been thrown forward in a heap during the downward flight. Clothing was burned from them and one body had everything but the shoes burned from it.

"Pilot Russell and his assistant died with their hands on the controls and were practically unrecognizable in death.

Blossom Burgert who fell in the water just before him. He was trying to rescue Miss Burgert when the ice broke with him.

Raymond Seitz was near the scene and in an effort to rescue the two in the water the breaking ice caused him to fall in the water also. An older Seitz boy presented a rope from a passing autoist and managed to get Miss Burgert and Raymond Seitz from the water, but was unable to help William in time.

A boat was pushed out into the water and by means of an ice hook and rope Albert Fabian brought Todhunter's body from water. Efforts were made to restore respiration. Owing to the severe cold of the atmosphere he was rushed to the Good Samaritan hospital where the pulmotor was used to no avail. The Todhunter boy was in the water about 15 minutes.

It is said that Miss Burgert and Raymond Seitz made an extreme effort to hang onto the rope or they would no doubt have drowned also.

The fire department was notified but arrived after Mr. Fabian had taken the Todhunter boy from the water.

William Todhunter was 15 years old, born Oct. 15, 1914, the son of William and Ada Todhunter. He was in the eighth grade at Junior High school. While skating on the ice at the Cardington dam, Wright crashed through the ice, falling in deep water. He clung to the edge of the ice for 10 or 15 minutes before any one noticed his predicament.

His cries attracted a filling station attendant who rescued him with the assistance of a wire. Wright did not suffer from the exposure. He is an employe of an Edison mill as truck driver.

Transfer of Enforcement Only Has Clear Path

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—An uncertain congress began work today on the legislative program proposed by President Hoover and his law enforcement commission for tightening enforcement of national prohibition.

The president's recommendation for transfer of prohibition enforcement from the treasury to the department of justice alone seemed to have a clear road to early enactment. All the other presidential recommendations appeared headed into controversies and lengthy debates.

Plan Pageant To Send Members to Camp

Plans to present a pageant to provide money for the members to attend a summer camp, were made at a meeting of the City Young People's union of Presbyterian churches at the Prospect Street M. E. church.

Miss Winifred Warner, state young people's worker, gave a talk yesterday, with Christian unity as the basis for the address. Some of the present day problems of young people were stressed.

The next meeting of the local council will be held Feb. 3 at the First Presbyterian church at 2:30 o'clock.

ANOTHER ROAD LEVY VOTE IS FORECAST

Proposal Likely To Be Up Again Next Fall, Officials Say

meeting of township officials in Columbus Jan. 30 and 31 and at the state meeting of county commissioners and surveyors Feb. 5, 6, and 7. With definite information resulting from these conferences at hand, Marion county officials expect to be in position to proceed with their program for 1930.

County Surveyor Leavens said today that according to a tentative understanding at this time, the county will center its attention this year mainly on repair of bridges. This plan is based on the idea that while it will be possible for the public to travel safely over roads that are not in the best of shape bridges in poor repair are a menace to lives and property.

With the two-mill road levy continuing, county officials had looked forward to having all of the county's road debt paid off by 1931, thus making it possible to collect less for upkeep of the thoroughfares. With the road levy cut, however, it is likely that issuance of more bonds will become necessary, they say.

Available This Year

Revenue from the two-mill levy will still be available this year. After that it will cease, unless another vote is taken this year and reverses the voters' decision of last year. Because of this situation, county officials have virtually decided to use a large part of this year's receipts from the levy on bridge repairs. Money from the gasoline tax can not be spent on bridges, the surveyor says.

The county's receipts from gasoline tax this year is expected to run about $420,000, according to the estimate of Auditor Earl E. Thomas.

7 Hours in Bed and Not 7 Minutes' Sleep!

The Toll Acidity Takes

When you go to bed dog-tired and still can't sleep and you rise in the morning more tired than when you went to bed, it's a sign you're "acid". Excess acid, formed in the stomach as a result of our unnatural eating habits, causes acid-in-digestion with gas, sourness and burning and sets up poisonous putrefaction in the gastro-intestinal canal which saps our strength and vitality and so taxes our nerves that we can't sleep at night or work efficiently during the day.

Magnesia, Oxoids, developed in Germany by a famous, 100-year-old pharmaceutical house, correct acidity in the right way! Upon contact with the acid in the stomach, Magnesia Oxoids generate nascent, or active oxygen. The "fire" oxygen stimulates the alkaline gastric mucus, checks putrefaction in the gastro-intestinal canal and stimulates the activities of the intestinal walls which adds the natural movement of the bowels. All three effects are necessary to the true correction of acidity.

5-Day Acidity Test

To ascertain just how "acid" you are, make this test. Get a package of Magnesia Oxoids from Bradley's Drug Store or any other good druggist. Take two after each meal for a few days and see how much better you feel—how much more soundly you sleep and how much more energy you have. If you don't get more than amazing results, return the balance of the Oxoids to the druggist and he will refund the purchase price promptly and in full—Adv.

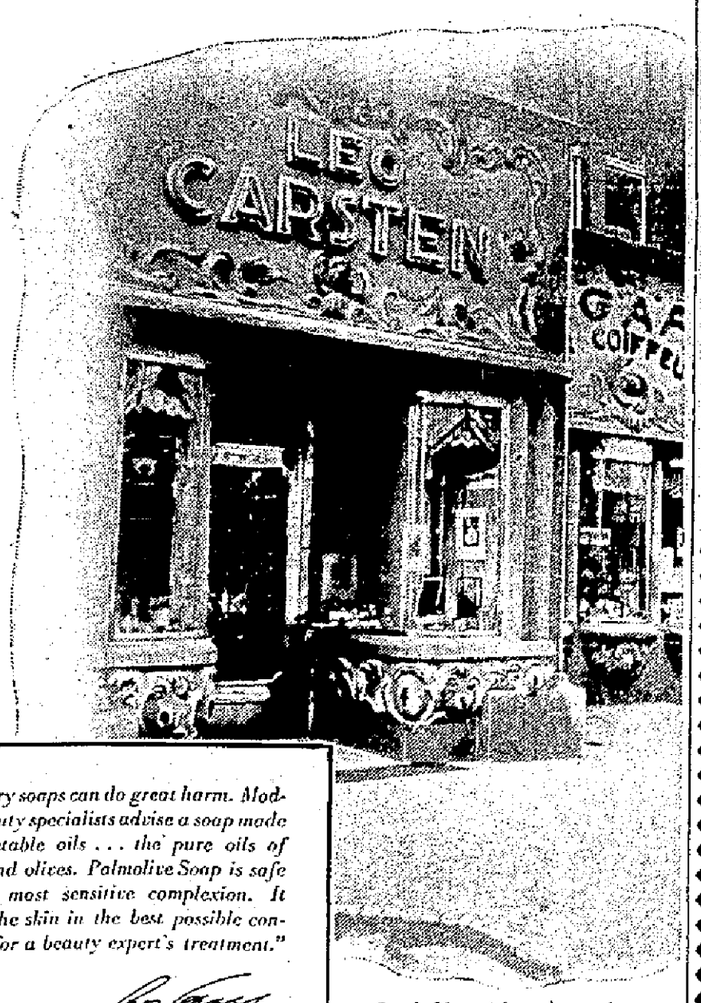
"Ordinary soaps can do great harm"

says the famous beauty expert

CARSTEN of Berlin

"Daily cleansing with Palmolive Soap is the basis of all my treatments, even the most elaborate"



'Ordinary soaps can do great harm. Modern beauty specialists advise a soap made of vegetable oils . . . the pure oils of palm and olives. Palmolive Soap is safe for the most sensitive complexion. It leaves the skin in the best possible condition for a beauty expert's treatment."

Leo Carsten

KURFÜRSTENDAMM 200, BERLIN

Facade of Carsten's famous beauty salon on the Kurfurstendamm in Berlin . . . one of the most elegant shops on an avenue famous for its smartness.

Today, more than ever before, it is important to wash the face with this soap containing olive oil . . . safe, bland, non-irritating.

NEW beauty treatments, such as ultra-violet rays and radio-active preparations, undoubtedly have their value in certain conditions of the skin, but it must not be imagined that older and simpler methods are superseded," says Leo Carsten, proprietor of the famous "Figaro" beauty shop on the Kurfurstendamm in Berlin.

"Soap and water, for example, are still the finest possible cleansers for the skin," he adds. "You will realize the importance of this when I say that daily cleansing with Palmolive Soap is the basis of all my treatments, even the most elaborate."

Herr Carsten, better known as "Figaro," is head of the leading beauty salon in middle Europe . . . located on one of the most fashionable streets in the world. He, himself, is well known in Berlin social circles as well as in the world of beauty science.

18,900 famous experts agree

In this shop . . . in other beauty shops patronized by the smart women of the world's leading capitals . . . the advice to use Palmolive is part of every recommended home facial treatment.

Palmolive is made of the oils of palm and olives . . . no other fats whatever. Its color is the natural color of those oils. Its natural odor makes unnecessary the addition of heavy perfumes.

This is the Palmolive treatment

This is the way to get the best results: make a creamy lather of Palmolive Soap and warm water. Massage it into the face and throat. Rinse with warm water, then with cold. That's all. Yet thousands of great beauty experts, millions of their clients, find it the most effective safeguard for beauty. And Palmolive costs so little that one uses it for the bath, of course, as well. Begin these twice-a-day treatments tomorrow. They will protect your skin from irritation . . . keep it fresh, glowing, lovely.

Rodeo Obtained by Marion County Fair Board for This Year

PERFORMANCES WILL BE GIVEN EACH DAY

Members Hope To Stimulate Interest in Annual Agricultural Exhibition

PLAN SEASON TICKETS

New Arrangement on Admission Fees Scheduled; Concessions Being Sold

That all Marion county will see a first class rodeo as a free attraction to the Marion county fair in 1930 was virtually assured Saturday when the Marion county Agricultural Society contracted with Burgess-Carruthers fair booking association for the presentation of the Triple R Ranch Rodeo during the week of the fair, and afternoon racing cards will be interspersed with a short acts by the rodeo in front of the grandstand.

Fifty head of stock, including broncbusters, steers, ponies have been contracted for, and 30 persons will appear in the rodeo to entertain Marion county crowds.

Interest of persons who node it a practice to attend more than one day of the fair will not lag, for the rodeo promises a change of program at each performance. The featured acts will appear in front of the grandstand during the night fair, according to Carl Sifritt, secretary of the fair board.

Plans Season Tickets

By the terms of a contract signed Saturday, the Marion County Agricultural Society is to pay $2,250 to bring this rodeo to Marion fair week.

The fair board was led to include a rodeo in the list of 1930 fair attractions by the success which has attended other county fairs of the state when a worthwhile free feature was given. By presenting this rodeo as a free feature, the board hopes to stimulate interest in the annual agricultural exhibitions, which has been apparently lagging in the last few years. As a result, the financial aspect of the fair has not been encouraging for several years.

All Marion county residents will be given an opportunity to see more for their money this year than ever before, fair officials point out. Not only has a free attraction been provided but an arrangement to sell "season" tickets for $1 has also been worked out by the board.

Reduce Membership Rate

These tickets will contain serial numbers up to five, and will entitle the holder to either take four companions with him to one session of the fair, or to attend five separate sessions. These tickets are to be placed on sale immediately, and will be sold until Sept. 5. None may be bought after that date, according to Carl Sifritt, secretary. After the week of the fair has opened, nothing but single 35 cents admission will be sold, he said.

Membership in the Marion County Agricultural society was reduced from $2 to $1.50 Saturday by action of the board. The holder of a membership is entitled to one vote. There must be at least 100 members each year or the society ceases legally exist. Exhibitor tickets will remain at $2 as before.

Rent of art hall space per front foot has been reduced from $2 to $1.50.

Petition of pet stock men for class in pet stock entries was tabled by the board Saturday. This will probably be acted on at the next meeting.

Sell Concessions

The calf club, one of the features of last year's fair which was worked out with C. B. Rayburn, county superintendent of schools, will again furnish an exhibit at the fair. The club will be open to all entries, but the fair board will not finance any calves as it did for the 1929 fair.

Prizes will be: first $20; second, $17.50; third, $15; fourth, $12.50; fifth, $10; to all other entries, $5.

A total of $1,500 in concession lease already been sold by the fair board for the 1930 exhibition. Advertisement for bids on the fair's stand concessions for the year will probably be seen some time this week. Concessions already sold include rides, novelties, soft drinks and games.

Slight changes have been tentatively made in the race program for 1930, according to Carl Sifritt. These changes have not yet been completed, and will be acted on at a meeting of the executive board in a meeting on Feb. 1.

GIRL IS DEAD FROM FIEND'S GUN WOUND

Janet Blood Succumbs in Cleveland Hospital; Renew Search for Man

CLEVELAND, Jan. 20—"Wanted for murder" was written across the police record of Cleveland's "mad masher" today as funeral arrangements were being made for Miss Janet Frater Blood, 16-year-old high school girl, whom he fatally wounded Jan. 2 when she resisted his attentions.

Miss Blood died yesterday after a 15-day fight against the ravages of the bullet fired by the as yet unknown gunman who has terrorized women and girls throughout the city by his fiendish criminalities.

At Miss Blood's bedside when she died was her father. The girl's mother has been dead two years.

All members of the Cleveland police department were notified immediately of the girl's death and renewed intensity was given into the hunt for the prowling gunman. Miss Blood was the third victim of the "mad masher's" gun. Both of the other victims have recovered although their wounds at the time were dangerous.

Agitation was spread throughout the city today following news of the girl's death for an increase in the police department.

SHE THOUGHT:
"I'd like to call your attention to that ad behind you."

Yet, to be polite,

Girls politely snubbed him

. . . until he discovered why . . "B.O." (Body Odor)

HE COULDN'T understand it. All day long the incident bothered him. What had he done? Why had she left him so abruptly on the trolley that morning? Why did girls always seem to avoid him?

Suddenly an idea flashed into his mind. "B.O."—body odor. Could he be guilty? Impossible—yet suppose he was? . . . That very day he switched to Lifebuoy. Now he's a favorite with everybody—invited everywhere. "B.O." no longer robs him of popularity.

It is hard to realize that we may be guilty of "B.O." But just stop and think. We all perspire. Even on coldest days our pores give off a quart of odor-causing waste. True, we don't notice it. Our sense of smell quickly becomes deadened to an ever-present odor. But it's only too apparent to others.

Why, then, risk offending when it's so easy to be safe? Just wash and bathe with Lifebuoy. Its creamy, refreshing antiseptic lather penetrates pores so deeply, purifies so thoroughly that "B.O." completely vanishes. And how good you feel after a Lifebuoy bath—how gloriously fresh and clean!

Keeps complexions radiant

Lifebuoy is a marvelous complexion soap. Watch dull skins freshen—poor complexions glow with radiant health. Its pleasant extra-clean scent, that vanishes as you rinse, tells you Lifebuoy purifies. Get some today.

SEEKS STATE'S HELP IN FIGHTING FLOODS

Ottawa and Findlay Delegation Will Call on Governor Cooper

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—Flood conditions described as being the worst ever experienced here, had today caused the formation of a delegation from this city and Findlay, to call upon Gov. Myers Y. Cooper, to seek the creation of a conservancy district around the Blanchard river.

Two hundred families were marooned in their homes for several days last week, when the Blanchard river overflowed its banks, due to the excessive rainfall.

The delegation which will call upon the governor to determine what assistance can be granted by the state, will also discuss the possibility of a legislative act to provide relief.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache, no sneezing, sniffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.—Adv.

Somebody ought to tell her

FOR every woman there is a sermon in the case of this lovely Pittsburgh girl (name withheld). Outdoors others find her so charming, so gay. But in the drawing room they politely avoid her. She can't understand it. The truth is that her trouble, which goes unnoticed in the open air, becomes instantly apparent—and offensive—indoors. Somebody ought to tell her. It would be a kindness. But nobody has the courage to do so. Even an intimate friend would hesitate to discuss a matter like this.

It's folly to assume that you never have halitosis, the unforgivable social fault. One out of every three is either an occasional or constant offender, surveys show.

Halitosis is caused by fermenting food particles in the mouth. Minor infections of the oral tract. Bad teeth, and Pyorrhea.

Kills Germs—Destroys Odors

Since you, yourself, cannot tell when you have halitosis, the wise precaution is to gargle with full strength Listerine. Every morning. Every night. And between times before meeting others.

Undiluted Listerine strikes at the cause of odors because it's an active—though safe—germicide. Even the stubborn Staphylococcus Aureus (pus) germ is killed by it in 15 seconds. Furthermore, being a powerful deodorant it immediately destroys all odors arising in the mouth. Leaves your breath sweet and normal.

Be at your best

Keep Listerine handy in home and office and use it often.

Columbus is enjoying the thrill of a chair-rocking contest. We have felt all along that Columbus, sooner or later, could develop a spirit of civic initiative.

A Berlin workman, who found a 2,500,000-mark note and returned it to the man who had dropped it, was given a reward of sixty marks—twelve dollars. No, we are not mistaken. These scene was Berlin and not Glasgow.

Seven members of the coast guard operating out of Marblehead, this state, arrested on a charge of having accepted a $25,000 bribe from a Toledo rum-runner. Let us hope that the army and navy will not be exposed to liquor corruption.

Of course, up in International Falls, Minnesota, where a temperature of forty-two degrees below zero was experienced last week, the air is so dry that such temperatures are not noticeable. No patriotic resident of Minnesota will hesitate a minute about explaining that to visitors, even though it isn't so.

Italy has opened the most up-to-date and powerful broadcasting station in Europe. It was a cinch that Mr. Mussolini would never rest content with anything less than the widest possible field for self-expression.

A wet New York congressman last week stated on the floor of the house that 100,000 speakeasies flourish in New York City under the protection of the bootleggers and "criminals enlisted in the dry service." Great Scott! Can it be that the New York wets want more than that?

One of the big soap concerns of the country announces that its net earnings for the six months ended December 31, last, were $11,639,819. If there's anything in the theory that cleanliness is next to godliness, we of America must be far more spiritual than we are accredited with being.

A Factor Contributing to Crime.

It is the decidedly general contention of the pronounced wets—one might say, the universal contention of the wet element—that prohibition is responsible for the reign of crime which today obtains in this country in defiance of the honest element in the forces of law and order. The drys will not admit this, holding that crime was rampant throughout the land before the prohibition amendment became a part of the basic law of the land something less than ten years since. The element which takes the middle course between the ultra wets and the ultra drys may hold prohibition not so much responsible for our crime as the abuse of prohibition, for it is lack of law enforcement which makes the abuse of prohibition what it is today and makes possible the flaunting of crime, as crime is financed from the ill-gotten returns from rum-running and bootlegging.

But going back to first causes, we are not so sure that the adoption of the primary system could not be indicted as primarily responsible, in that it has given us an official personnel which has weakened the cause of law and order and generally impaired the protection to life and property which a people has the right to expect and enjoy under constitutional government.

However, regardless of responsibility for our crime, the lack of law enforcement should not be passed without giving consideration to one of the chief influences responsible for the breaking down of law enforcement. We refer to the civil service.

It's not the popular thing to attack, or even criticise, the civil service system, but no person capable of reasoning can evade the fact that so long as the agents of law enforcement in community centers can be removed only for cause and then only with the approval of such action by boards usually prejudiced in their favor, there will not be that enthusiastic initiative in law enforcement there would be if there were not practically assurance of holding places under the civil service up to the time of retirement and pensions beyond that time for life.

The late President Grover Cleveland no doubt meant well when he became the champion of civil service reform in government service, but it is to be questioned if civil service has not proved more of a liability than an asset to the country, for such was the force of character of President Cleveland, to say nothing of the influence of his high office, that he popularized civil service throughout the land.

If President Hoover's law enforcement commission fails to go into the effect of civil serve on law enforcement, it will pass one of the chief contributing factors to the breaking down of the enforcement of law and order throughout the country.

Seeing in the Dark.

An electrical image-receiving device which enables the human eye to see in darkness, the result of two or three years' experimentation by John L. Baird, Scottish television inventor, was given its first American demonstration in a New York electrical studio, one day last week, and amazed not only the captains of a number of North Atlantic liners, but even the television and radio experts among those in attendance at the demonstration.

Although the studio was in total darkness, those in one end of it, by the use of the device, were able to see perfectly every slightest movement of those in the other. In fact, the images of those in range of vision through the device were somewhat sharper and clearer in the darkness than they were after the lights were turned on.

The instrument, which its inventor terms a "noctovisor" for the reason that it sees in darkness or in the night, utilizes the infra-red ray, which in the spectrum of frequencies are found below the visible light—the light which is visible to the eye. As these rays are capable of penetrating fog, mist, smoke and many opaque substances, they enable the human eye to pick up images close at hand plainly and will catch lights at a distance of from two to three miles. In tests along the English channel in such fogs as are ordinarily encountered at sea, shore lights three miles away became visible by the use of the device, and in typical London fogs, which almost invariably are densest along the Thames, the rays of an ordinary automobile headlight were plainly visible along the Thames embankment when the car was easily a quarter of a mile away.

It is planned to give the invention a fog test in New York harbor, the next time a sufficiently heavy fog pervails to make the navigation of the big liners so dangerous that they anchor rather than chance the risk of navigating through it, the test being suggested by the ship commanders present, who realize how much the device will mean to navigation if it will perform in a heavy fog as successfully as it did in darkness in last week's demonstration.

Radio experts, especially those seeking the perfection of television, expressed the opinion that the invention could be employed to use infra-red rays instead of the visible light utilized to play across the face and figure of the person being observed, an added advantage being that infra-red rays could be more easily regulated than the lights now in use for that purpose.

But perhaps the field in which the Baird device will prove the most helpful is that of aviation. All aviation experts are as one that the greatest menace to the experienced aviator is fog. Walter S. Lemmon, consulting engineer of the Radio Industry company, affiliated with the Curtiss-Wright Aviation company and others, saw the possibilities of the use of the invention as a part of the equipment of planes. The pilots of planes thus equipped would be able to see warning lights on buildings and towers, and thus avoid the possibility of accidental collisions, with the further possibility that it would enable the pilot to pick up other obstacles in sufficient time to avoid accident.

If tests under actual navigation conditions, both those at sea or in the air, show that the "noctovisor" will do all that is claimed for it, its inventor can not be denied honor as a benefactor to humanity.

The fifth ringleader in the Folson prison rioting of Thanksgiving day was legally executed last Friday. In the face of the fates suffered by the leaders of the outbreak, rioting is liable to lose popularity as a great indoor sport in that institution.

Disguised as policemen, members of a blackmailing gang in Rome have been living lives of ease by holding up young people, caught necking, under threats of arrest and exposure. Their victims must have been easy. Over here they would have been proud of it.

Twelve degrees below zero here last Saturday, while out in Montana the mercury fell to fifty-five below. That's what we like about our weather; it's always dependable and never goes to extremes. In the summer season it is just reasonably warm and in the winter it's just sufficiently cool to be exhilarating.

A cable from London says the members of the American delegation to the five-power conference are cool to the MacDonald plan to scrap battleships. Naturally. "The burnt child dreads the fire." We had ours at the Washington disarmament gathering.

The Nebraska secretary of public welfare has announced the births of children to four mothers in one section out there, each of whom already had families of ten children. It is apparent that the birth control propaganda hasn't made much impression on at least one section of the Blackwater state.

Chicago announces that the construction of the first two buildings of her coming world's fair will be started June 1 of the present year. It might be of more interest to possible fair visitors to learn when she proposes to begin construction on bomb-proof hotels.

A rancher in the Proberta district of California is boasting that his cows, which he pastures in a meadow of Sudan grass nine feet in height, have become self-educated to the fact that, if they eat the lower leaves and do not disturb the tops, they can keep right on grazing in the shade. Really, it begins to look as though the honors of the Winsted, Connecticut, fictionist are seriously threatened.

Scarcely a day passes that one doesn't read of one or two cases of occupants of homes being held up and robbed of their valuables. With legal restrictions in many states against the carrying of concealed weapons and against the possession of pistols and revolvers in some, bandits realize that they have every advantage over the homeholder, and act on the strength of it.

Checking Bright's Disease.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

The kidneys perform an important function. Through them pass nearly one-half of all the waste products of the body. Since the waste materials of the system, especially those which go through the kidneys, are poisons, it is very necessary that there should be no interruption to their passage.

In nephritis, or Bright's disease as it is commonly called, there is inflammation of the kidneys and their function is disturbed. The kidneys can not take care of the waste products.

The chief variety of the food we eat is called protein. For instance, lean meats and white of egg are proteins. The main waste materials resulting from digestion of the proteins are nitrogen and nitrogen compounds. These are eliminated largely through the kidneys; they are the uric acid and ammonia.

In checking this disease, there must be reduction of foods rich in nitrogen. At the same time, the patient must so regulate his daily life that he will need the least amount of protein food. This will mean placing a limitation on his daily physical exertion so there will not be a demand for such food.

The chief nitrogenous output of the kidneys is urea. About an ounce of this waste substance is voided each day. The more meat taken the more urea will be developed. These nitrogenous substances are not handled properly by the kidneys in Bright's disease. When the kidneys do not function properly, the waste products accumulate in the body and act as poisons.

There must be sensible control of the food intake and measures to make the skin more active. In acute nephritis milk may be the only safe food to take. Even this may be found to be too rich in protein. Water should be taken freely and to this may be added sugar, cereals, gruel, and possibly bread. Buttermilk and oatmeal water may be useful.

In the first stages of the disease milk will supply all the nourishment needed if it is well borne. In the progress of the disease, vegetables may be added, and later on, perhaps, a limited amount of meat.

The bowels must be kept open and the kidneys active. Frequent baths, gentle exercise, a warm climate, and mental poise are all helpful. With proper care and diet begun early in the disease the patient may count on a long and useful life.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

H. W. F. Q—Could drowsiness be caused by ptosis of the bowels? I am not troubled with constipation and get plenty of sleep. Is this regarded as serious?

A—Yes, it is possible that elimination is delayed causing infection in the system. This produces auto-intoxication; drowsiness and fatigue are usual under these conditions. Not necessarily, but it should have proper medical attention. Have your doctor advise you.

SUNNY B. Q—What is the cause of dark circles beneath the eyes?

A—Lack of sleep, dissipation, constipation, indigestion or a kidney condition may be responsible.

BETTY JOE. Q—How can I reduce?

2—What will remove blackheads?

3—What causes eczema, and what treatment is suggested?

A—Cut down on sweets and starches and keep the system clear.

2—Careful diet and general care will bring about results.

3—There is usually some infection at the source of this disturbance. The diet and elimination are factors in many cases.

MISS A. B. S. Q—Is bran fattening? I sprinkle it over the morning cereal.

2—Is it true that a thyroid disturbance prevents reducing the weight?

A—No.

2—No, but the disturbance should have proper medical attention since overweight is sometimes due to trouble from this source.

U. H. Q—What will relieve an acid stomach?

A—Proper diet and the correction of constipation.

Editorial Opinion.

SHE'S A NICE GIRL!

Pink cherry blossoms of the spring, slant-eyed girls of old Japan in gay kimonos, and a rhythmic graceful dance may not seem dangerous stuffs, but vast and bloody wars have brewed from less inflammable ingredients.

All in all, it looks as if the enterprising Washington business men, eager for more gold in their coffers during our capital's famous cherry blossom season, have started something.

The big business men, who promote full hotels when the cherry blossoms blow pink froth across the "Tidal" basin, decided to help nature in a bigger and better way this spring.

The city's chamber of commerce coaxed Japan to send over a group of her prettiest geisha girls to dance in national robes among the pink petals of this Occidental city.

The tumult and shouting arose, dispatch "as if, when the Federation of Christian Missions with headquarters in Tokio protested the invitation on the grounds that "geisha girls" were not fit companions for ladylike Miss Americas.

American business men in Japan, as well as native Japanese papas and brothers and husbands, saw the red rag when the church people cabled Secretary of State Stimson their protest.

It rather looks as if some one needed to find out just what a "geisha girl" is. As usual, the human tendency to swallow traditional interpretations and to bolt and shy at words with a traditional connotation even if careful, rational analysis would fill that traditional interpretation as full of holes as a nice Swiss cheese, seems to have pulled a boner which, to say the least, demands profuse apologies from some one.

For the truth is that though lurid and dishonest fiction might have the wide-eyed reader of trash believe that a geisha girl is merely a nice title for an Oriental daughter of joy and lady of the evening, a geisha girl may really hold the same place of honor and respect and affection in the nation's heart as a Mary Pickford or Ethel Barrymore in ours.

The "geisha girl," as a matter of fact, is honored above girls of other castes in Japan. She must be sans reproche. She is an entertainer, a singer or dancer or reader of poetry. She generally comes from "high family" and has a real feeling for her "art."

Because an American world can not understand another world's custom of hiring girl entertainers for private parties, it carelessly classifies them for the fun of being shocked.

It seems inexcusable that an American organization right in the midst of the country of the geisha girl could be party to an erroneous conception which might be excused on the basis of ignorance in those who never crossed the Pacific.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PROHIBITION AFTER TEN YEARS.

For just ten years prohibition enforcement has been carried on according to the requirements of the Volstead act. There has been no modification of the law; indeed, penalties have been made more severe. That conditions are anything but satisfying is very generally concede by the drys as well as the wets. The former have demanded greatly-increased activity. The latter have militedly insisted that no legislation can prevent drinking.

The law enforcement commission was proposed by Herbert Hoover while he was a candidate—indeed, it was suggested in his speech accepting the nomination. It was appointed with the approval of the country at large. The report just submitted to the president and by him transmitted to the congress is preliminary only. It frankly admits that the problem is an exceedingly intricate one. The commission is not ready at this time to comment either on prohibition as a policy or upon the virtues of the Volstead enactment itself. Its investigations are to continue with the possibility of open sessions for public hearings. But in the meantime there stands the law, and law must be enforced. The commission offers a program for enforcement which, if adopted, should "give the law a fair trial."

With the president, the attorney general and the secretary of the treasury fully supporting the recommendations of the commission, the congress, overwhelmingly dry in both houses, can not fail to put them in operation. The courts are swamped with all sorts of prohibition cases, most of them of a trivial nature. To relieve this congestion is highly important, and the commission undertakes to do it by removing from the courts the bulk of these offenses. If this can be done constitutionally—and Chairman Wickersham and Attorney General Mitchell are convinced that it can—the federal court dockets can be cleared of the little fellows and the big offenders brought to speedy trial.

Concentrating detection, the preparation of evidence and prosecution in one bureau under the attorney general should be a valuable aid. Co-operation of the customs, immigration and coast guard services along the borders of Canada and Mexico, with border patrol organized and directed by the coast guard, ought to reduce smuggling to a minimum if anything can.

The commission has started in an impressive way. Its plans, if put into force, should prove either that enforcement is practical or that it is not, as the wets claim. There should be no hesitation on the part of the congress in enacting all the legislation asked.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Cosmic Rays.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

New problems concerning the nature and mechanism of the other realms of space have been raised in recent years by the discovery of what are known as cosmic rays. This radiation penetrates the outer atmosphere of the earth, and is believed, with little chance of doubt, to emanate from the great spiral nebulae. It is now regarded as the most fundamental physical phenomenon of the universe. It is at work, with tremendous force, all the time. So powerful has it been discovered to be that it breaks up several million atoms in each of our bodies every second. While the hardest terrestrial radiation penetrates only a few inches of lead, the cosmic radiation penetrates as much as 175 to 180 inches of lead. The voltage of the cosmic rays is hundreds of times the voltage of the hardest terrestrial rays.

One of the questions which naturally arises is: Is there not danger of this radiation gradually increasing until it becomes insupportable and so destroys all life?

Calculation shows that the capacity of space for radiation is practically infinite. The universe will not become saturated with radiation until its temperature has been raised 7,500,000,000,000 degrees — which would require the dissolution of many, many times a universe the size of ours.

Many people, including not a few scientists, enjoy playing with the idea that the universe is constantly renewing itself, and will never suffer dissolution. If matter has been found in our neighborhood to be suffering annihilation and transforming energy into radiation, why may not a reverse process be taking place in other parts of the universe? While disintegration is taking place here, rebuilding may be going on there?

Unfortunately, transformation of matter into radiation—so far as science has been able to discover—is not a reversible process. Radiation has never been caught changing back into matter.

As we go back to first causes, we can learn from science only that very, very far back in time was the universe wound up. A movement of rotation was set up; but science gives no answer to the question: Who gave the original spin to matter?

The universe began as a form of gigantic mechanism, fully wound up. From the beginning it began to run down. It is now like some mighty clock which has partly run down. The beginning of the universe, according to the calculations of present-day science, was not infinitely remote in the past. The ending of the universe will take place, it is estimated, at some time in the future not infinitely remote.—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, Jan. 20—Diary of a Nit Peppy: A gray, muggy day and the skyscrapers alight before noon, an eerily beautiful spectacle. And were it not for the fang noises New York would be the most entrancing city in all the world. So many cater-cornered through the town, hurrying a different place to eat.

And put in at a lunch counter for a Pennsylvania for a beef stew, with a heapings of chili sauce, was the best meal I have had in a fortnight, and so I told about the great department stores in Herald square and riding up and down on escalators.

Home and did on my dinner jacket with my wife to a dinner with the Joe Mc and to hear an operetta, very dull, and found myself nodding albeit every one else was in a lather of enthusiasm. Then hurried home to hear a broadcast on the radio and the hair raising mystery tayle.

The decline of ostracism is marked in New York of late. Nothing these days puts a person beyond the social pale. Less than two or five years ago a divorced woman faced a procolade of polite sniffs and even a divorced man found friends greeting him with hearty handshakes and "get away" excuses.

So far as can be noticed today there are no restrictions whatever in social contacts. In those carefully-selected dancing clubs with hand-picked memberships one sees the international gold-digger, the wastrel living on venerable women and sundry others with purple pasts.

Between acts at the theaters, a night hostess prances up and down the aisles waving familiarly and chirping to blood-blooded entries in the Social register. The best tables in the highest priced cafes are often occupied by characters of the underworld.

Afternoon teas in big hotels have their daily sprinkling of famous courtesans. Names that flare into thick scandal headlines one day are noted in the society columns the next. Park avenue hosts invite Broadway to their dinners. New York has one requirement only in social eligibility: Are you talked about?

The Way of the World.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

One reads from Carlyle: "If a book come from the heart, it will contrive to go to other hearts." And so it might be said of if words—daily words—come from the heart they contrive to reach other hearts. Many of us are fooled by words that merely slide smoothly from the lips—no matter how appropriately and how graciously. No man can make great protestations of friendship and convince another that he is indeed a friend unless he really is one. Words, to express ideas, are extremely important. Their value can hardly be overestimated. Words to express very honest emotions are of little importance. It is by the essence of personality and in a certain manner that one "gets across" feelings.

Voltaire once remarked that rare books were not worth anything because, if they were worth anything, they would not be rare. This, of course, is a quite inaccurate remark. In this instance Voltaire was too much of an optimist. He for the moment assumed that intellectual taste was such that there was naturally a demand for the extraordinary. Fact is nearly everybody wants common things, whether in books or anything else.

But speaking of the commonplace, most of life's really vital attributes and certainly many of its sweetest and most satisfying experiences are entirely in the realm of the commonplace. Rain and sleep, and food and rest are commonplace. Perhaps it was not said quite so well as by George Borrow, who wrote more than one beautiful book many years ago:

"Life is sweet, brother. Do you think it is? There's night and day, brother, both sweet things. There's sun, moon, and stars, brother, all sweet things. There's the wind on the heath. Who would wish to die?"

It has been said that the glory of the world would be lost in forgetfulness if God had not provided man with a remedy in books. One who does not keep the mind active and exercised by reading is sure of a flabby mind in old age. Pick and choose. Don't try to "read everything." Don't try to read everything. Read some things many times. Be entertained by some books; be instructed by others; master some others.

Bertrand Russell, heavy thinker with a smooth, sure touch in writing, presents the world with his ideas about marriage and morals in a new book under that title. He does sell proceeds courageously along straight lines to his own conclusions. They may not be your conclusions. Liberal in many ways he is conservative in others. You may be shocked or you may not be. At least you will be made to think and your mind will be exercised.

CONFERENCE CHIEFS HOLD BRIEF SESSION

Procedure for Opening of Naval Arms Parley Are Brought Up

LONDON, Jan. 20—The chiefs of delegations of the five powers who will be represented at the opening of the naval arms conference tomorrow held an extremely cautious approach to the multiplicity of complex questions confronting the parley when they met at 10 Downing st. for the first time today.

The meeting lasted less than two hours and it was evident when the delegates left the official residence of Premier MacDonald that they had refrained from bringing up matters of a controversial nature.

At the conclusion of the conference the leaders, Premier MacDonald who acted as spokesman, issued a communique which was extremely brief in form.

"We have informally discussed matters," the premier declared. "No definite has been settled, but there were mutual expressions of good will which are happy auguries for success of the conference."

From other sources it was learned, however, that the heads of the delegations agreed that following the opening of the conference tomorrow, which would be devoted to "personal exchanges of views" with a second plenary session being held on Tuesday.

Then, it is expected, the chiefs of the delegations will unfold their national positions in greater detail.

EIGHT MINERS DIE IN GAS EXPLOSION

Blast Believed Caused When State Falls from Mine Roof, Releases Gas

BECKLEY, W. Va., Jan. 20—A mine explosion in No. 1 mine of the Lilly Brook Coal Co. at Lilly Brook, 10 miles from here, today had claimed the lives of eight miners.

The blast, which occurred yesterday, is believed by mine officials to have been caused when a quantity of slate fell from the mine roof and released some gas.

The bodies of the eight victims, six negroes and two white men, were recovered by rescue crews more than four hours after the blast. Ice-covered roads hampered the transportation of materials and rescue men.

3 ALLEGED BANDITS CAPTURED BY POSSE

Men Shot Believed To Be Escaped Prisoners from West Virginia

MACON, Ga., Jan. 20—Three alleged bandits were shot down and captured on the outskirts of Macon early today in a pitched gun battle with an armed posse. The authorities announced that the trio had been identified as Adrian and David Byas, brothers, and Basil Childress, who escaped from the West Virginia State penitentiary several days ago. The three men shot down this morning, police announced, were not the Jacksonville killers whom pursuing squads of police thought they had traced to Macon.

Adrian Byas had an arm shot away in the early morning gun battle and was not expected to live. David Byas and Childress were found to be seriously wounded. The three men were taken to a local hospital and were placed under a heavy guard.

Meanwhile the hunt for the trio of Jacksonville bandits, whom Jacksonville police announced had been identified as Roland Lalone and Watson Mouthrope, escaped Connecticut desperadoes and a companion, Leo Landry, continued in this vicinity.

Offices Do Not Belong To Holders, Judge Asserts

Florence Allen Scores Officials Who Believe They Can Do as They Please; Speaks at Calvary Church Under Auspices of County W. C. T. U.

"If we tolerate the conception that a man has a right to select a law with which he does not agree and violates that law, then the whole structure of the United States government falls," Judge Florence E. Allen of the Ohio Supreme Court said in an address last night at Calvary Evangelical church.

Her address followed a short introductory talk by Prosecuting Attorney Alfred E. Donithen, in which he declared that there is plenty of vice in the county today, and added that with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union back of him, he hopes within the next few months or year to do much greater work.

Prosecutor Donithen extended his appreciation to the W. C. T. U., sponsors of last night's program, for the stand it has taken on prohibition and for backing him in his efforts to rid the county of vice.

"I believe all law enforcers are faced with the greatest problem to be faced in this country," he continued. "The prohibition act should be enforced, for where you have a law in any country and that law is a matter that is always before the public, that is constantly discussed, it must be enforced, not only for the sake of law, but any disregard for one law breeds disregard for all law."

Believes Crisis Has Come

Mr. Donithen stated that he believed that at the end of a 10-year period, the crisis in national prohibition has come. "If the crisis is passed, you will find that the good, common sense of the American people will agree that the national prohibition act ought to be enforced. This enforcement should begin with the heads of the government."

Judge Allen in her talk scored those officials of the county, state and nation who regard their offices as their own, to do with as they please, instead of as the means through which the people gain the laws and enforcement which is their right.

She heartily seconded the talk made by Prosecutor Donithen, and reminded the people that they should not forget the obligation rests on them personally.

Adjustments Difficult

"Prohibition comes at a time when we humans are making difficult adjustments because of the speed of our modern lives. Boys and girls of today are faced with adjustments never before faced." Here she spoke of the many and wonderful improvements of today over 100 years ago.

"Speed and more speed make a romantic, fairy book time, but a difficult time when science has put so many playthings in our hands. We have not developed spirituality in proportion to our mechanical development.

"There are other laws on the books quite difficult to enforce, but no one says that they can't be enforced—the attitude being taken with prohibition.

"The prohibition law is difficult to enforce because its runs counter to the habits of a great people, rooted in them for generations. But that law is no harder to enforce than the narcotics law.

Many Difficult Laws

"There are many laws on the books which are difficult to enforce, but we do not say they are difficult, we go ahead and enforce these laws because they are on the books and are law and the community means them to be enforced.

"The time came when the world would not endure the open saloon. Prohibition was made a part of the law. When prohibition was enacted we had been building disrespect for law for decades." Here Judge Allen mentioned the constant evasion of the tax laws. "It had become so that we looked on government business as an interesting game.

"We will never get the maximum investment out of prohibition until the American people cease regarding the law as a mere game of politics.

"The growing boy and girl must have an opportunity to develop strong and energetic bodies and clear minds. Until we demand enforcement of law, we will never have the development.

Pageant Is Given

"The history of the last 10 years shows a great advancement, but immensely more can be done if the American people will rouse themselves to the great task before them and insist from the men and women they invest with public office, that from them they receive the performance of office as a trusteeship. A public office belongs to the American people, and not to the man who holds the office."

Judge Allen is herself a member of the W. C. T. U. Following a short prayer and song service led by the Rev. E. Radebaugh, pastor of the church, Mrs. Mary Jennings, county W. C. T. U. president, took charge of the program. Readings in keeping with the occasion were given, followed by a pageant at the close of Judge Allen's talk. The pageant was directed by Mrs. R. W. Kannie.

RHEUMATIC PAINS KEPT HER BEDRIDDEN

There was the house to clean, buttons to sew on and socks to darn, so much work to do—yet she was helpless. Rheumatic pains crippled her hands. She couldn't hold a broom or needle. Often rheumatism also settled in her legs and feet and she had to stay in bed. Nothing helped her until she rubbed good old St. Jacobs Oil on the tender spots. Relief came in one minute! This soothing, penetrating oil never disappoints and cannot burn the skin.

Swiftly it gets down under the skin and draws out pain and inflammation. That's why it is so good for rheumatic pains, aching joints, sprains, neuritis and lumbago. Get relief and forget the misery of pain. Get a small bottle of St. Jacob's Oil from your druggist. —Adv.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

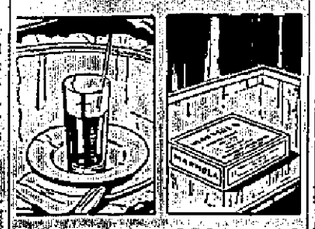
2 WAYS TO FIGHT FAT



MAKE YOUR CHOICE

THERE is no doubt that starvation with severe self-denial can diminish fat. But the results are often worse than the fat. Countless people have in late years found a better way. Modern science discovered it, modern physicians employ it. In every circle one can see the results. Excess fat is disappearing fast.

Research has discovered that most fat people suffer from an under-active gland. That gland largely controls nutrition. The modern method is to correct the deficiency, and thus turn more food into fuel and energy.

A famous medical laboratory embodies the method in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 22 years—millions of boxes of them. Users have told others, and the use has spread. The changes you see on every hand are due largely to Marmola.

The method is well-known. Physicians the world over employ it. Each box of Marmola contains the formula, also the reasons for results. So every user knows.

If you are over-fat and unhappy, or starving to reduce, you owe to yourself a test of Marmola. You owe it to your family and friends. Combat the cause, then watch results, as others have done for so long. Let Marmola itself convince you. Read the book in the box. Life may be longer and finer. Go start today.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 a box. Any druggist who is out will gladly order for you.

'The Secret Trail'

A Fascinating Mystery Story

SCOTLAND YARD GOES OUT AFTER ITS MAN

BY ANTHONY ARMSTRONG

CHAPTER 11

J[illegible]EZAIRE, without looking around, knew that he was being followed, and his brain was busy. Who had set this fellow on to him? It might be Neasden, or it might be some other member of the gang, not knowing he had been spotted himself and had grown suspicious. He fervently hoped he had not observed meeting Mario, but on reflection he was safe in that respect. He had taken precautions. The follower should be easy to shake off—he couldn't be much good or he would not have been employed. Jimmie settled down to wait.

He walked up to Oxford st[illegible] a bus that was nearly full and took one of the few vacant seats. The ferrety man, after a moment's indecision, went on top.

The lorry at Oxford Circus had double dismounted just as Rezaire was starting off again and he saw the brightly lighted entrance to the tube station. Here he bought a ticket at an automatic, raced down the moving stairway, dodged under the barrier and on to the "Up" escalator. He was exactly halfway up again when he glimpsed his shadower, whom the barriers had left a little helplessly careering down the other stairway. Jimmie caught a train of reception, though he had to have bowed ironically to his hat off.

At the station again he turned and walked rapidly to his room in order to change his clothes before going to the Grand Cross hotel, frowning as he remembered the events. Why, he thought, did people always underestimate his intelligence?

In this particular case Jimmie had been outwitted by one of the cleverness of old and tried for it. The little white-faced man was only a blind to distract attention from the real shadowing figure with a coarsely handsome face and full arrogant lips, wearing a hat pulled down over his eyes. The latter had thus shielded him completely and after watching Rezaire enter the Vine sidedoor himself disappeared into the private bar, where over a drink or so with the proprietor he at last extracted a small item of information which seemed to please him very much, for he chuckled triumphantly as he made hurriedly for the street and vanished in the evening dusk.

A Dangerous Game

Half an hour later Hyslop, properly dressed and with his usual various book of gilded youth, was being conducted upstairs to Mr. Ferguson's room in the Grand Cross hotel. He found Jimmie sitting thoughtfully on the bed staring out at the dark sky through the uncurtained window.

"Who was he?" asked Hyslop, hanging his hat on the bedpost.

"That's what's worrying me," replied Jimmie. "Somehow I feel it's not one of No. 1's little lot, because they can't have the slightest grounds for suspecting me yet. You see, they know I am an ex-convict, etc., so it'd be the hell of a mental jump for them to guess I'm now secret service. Especially since I consented quite nonchalantly to join their gang."

"Quite," said Hyslop encouragingly.

Jimmie got up and pulled the curtain. "Funny," he said reflectively, "if it hadn't been for the goddess of chance I might be just becoming one of their leading spirits."

"You are, for all you know. You're with the quarry and with the hounds at the same time, old son."

"Always a dangerous game," commented Rezaire soberly. "I'm not looking forward to the dinner with Neasden tonight. He may try and land me in something very definite and I want to * * * By the way, to continue your report, have you marked any one else as probably living in the place?"

Hyslop shook his head. "Only our friend with the big beak. I don't think I noticed a trick, either."

"Hm. One crook doesn't make a gang," said Rezaire, recalling the "three possibly four" of the dead man's notes. "I wonder who the hell that No. 1 is. He might be the murderer—in which case he was a little man with a mustache—I wish to the dickens I'd seen his face. And by the way"—he recollected the pair behind him at lunch—"I believe there's a girl, a flashy fair-haired thing, and a man * * *"

A Plan of Attack

"I saw that girl go in at lunch time—a lively looking blonde piece—with a little gap-toothed chappie. But I mistook them for innocent customers. They came out shortly before you did."

"That's the pair all right. They were lunching upstairs. They probably live on above too * * * That reminds me," Jimmie paused reflectively. "Before you came, H. H., I was looking over a plan for getting a squint at some of those upstairs rooms."

"Get in through that attic?"

"No, you ass. I've told you already that once we let them get suspicious they'll be off like a flash somewhere where we shan't find them before it's too late. That's the reason, too, I don't want to get the police in—which we might do at this point—apart from the fact I don't trust 'em and if they make the slightest slip we're done. * * * By the way, where's Vic?"

"Coming around here, old boy, at 6 for a cocktail."

"That girl seems to live on my cocktails," grumbled Jimmie. "Well, we'll go down and wait for her. I've got a stunt for you two to carry out to-night at the Coin de Paradis. I shall be there with Neasden, but you won't know me, of course."

"Poor Vic'll be scared stiff, old son when she learns you're trying to nail the very gang you're joining," remarked the young man thoughtfully.

"Why should she? Makes it easier."

Hyslop looked embarrassed. "Oh—er—I don't know, old chap," he said with some vagueness.

A Successful Reconnaissance

Jimmie felt greatly relieved to realize that Neasden was not already waiting in the upper room. It gave him time to collect his composure, for he had been getting more and more nervous of the meeting. Neasden as the spy he was intending to catch was a very different and far more dangerous person than Neasden as a vaguely possible confederate in the near future.

He settled down at a table. Marie approached him without a sign of recognition. At the same window table he saw the fair-haired girl of lunch time, even more startlingly dressed. That she was again there indicated to Jimmie that he had been perfectly right in putting her down as one of the gang. But if she was going to be there all the evening, Hyslop would have to be careful in carrying out his plan—even though he was a skilful actor—for the girl was certainly no fool. Presumably her former companion was not to be with her that evening, as she had already started her meal. To Mario's inquiry Jimmie said he would wait as he was expecting a friend.

He had been there two minutes when a stout little man with a beard, a paunch and a pair of large-lensed pince-nez came up from below.

"Pardon, M'sieu," he began, approaching Jimmie, "but you expect a Mr. Neasden," Jimmie nodded. "Well, he have telephoned that he is desolate, but he cannot come. Business have called him today to Yarmouth. But—que voulez vous?" he ejaculated and spread his hands.

Jimmie instantly looked as disappointed as possible for the benefit of the girl who, he could see, was listening intently. "I'd better go," he said, though nothing was further from his mind.

"Oh, non! M'sieu will stay, I hope. I have 'poulet en casserole Coin de Paradis' tonight."

Ah, so this was the proprietor, though Jimmie, A Monsieur L. Villon according to a small line of type under the menu head. Hyslop had seen him that morning, but this was Jimmie's first encounter. He covertly studied him under pretext of deliberation. He could not see the eyes behind the thick glasses, but from bushy eyebrows via prosperous middle to patent leather shoes, his whole appearance denoted harmless friendliness. Despite this, Jimmie realized that he by no means could he be completely unaware of the dubious character of the two or three customers who met regularly at his restaurant and presumably lived in the rooms above.

For the Regulars

Jimmie wondered how much he knew and determined to find out before the end of the evening. It was just possible he could be made use of, as Mario had been: for he looked the kind of man whom a whisper of police and secret service would frighten into submissive assistance.

Aloud he said kindly: "Well, mon'sieur, you tempt me. The poulet let it be. I hope to come here often. I like this upstairs room."

Monsieur Villon was delighted. "We have some regulars," he said, "and they all come to this room. It is for the regulars. Que voulez vous?" he ejaculated again. It seemed to be a characteristic expression of this funny little man. "Mr. Neasden he is a regular. And he ask on the telephone that you will dine here with him to-morrow night instead. He was desolated."

The old man then bowed to Jimmie, wished the girl by the window a courteous "Good evening," and vanished downstairs.

While waiting for his dinner Jimmie wondered what had taken Neasden to Yarmouth. Was it a lie, a blind for other activities? He thought not, for surely Neasden had no reason to suspect him. Or was it something to do with the Murchisons? It might be more than a coincidence that Neasden should have gone to Yarmouth the very day after finding Jimmie's faked notes about "a secret launch on the east coast." Even so, he could not understand his motive.

Rezaire felt he need not have worried about Hyslop's ability to deceive the fair-haired girl. There was no doubt that he was an accomplished actor. His arrival up the stairs in the guise of a young man who had had several cocktails was perfect. With him was Vic, in a very short frock which showed her silk-covered knees. She wore also rouge and lipstick to rival that of the girl at the window table.

An "Artist" at Dinner

Neither of the newcomers gave Rezaire a conscious glance, yet while the proprietor, who looked as though he had tried to dissuade them from penetrating upstairs, was hovering round, Jimmie heard Vic say, "Look at that wet-blanket sitting by himself!" followed by Hyslop's inane bray of laughter. Vic was an absolute artist, thought Jimmie at this. To ignore people completely did not always imply they were strangers—particularly before a clever and experienced observer like the blond girl—but to make a remark like that was just right. Moreover, it had also told Jimmie that Vic wanted to know why Neasden, whom she had been told would be there, was not present.

Rezaire finished his course and began to tap idly with his fingers on the table. It was an old trick he had used with Vic before. He saw her imperceptibly enlighten Hyslop; who took his cue and plunged at once into some story about how a fellow had insulted him at the club.

Vic listened ostensibly to him but actually to Jimmie's finger-tapping. Satisfied he had her attention, he sent swiftly, "N. not coming tonight" in Morse. Then he stopped. Though there was only the fair-haired spy in the room he did not want to risk anything. She had already been listening with both ears to what Hyslop and Vic were saying. And since, too, she was a member of No. One's gang and presumably was aware of his plotting, he was particularly anxious she should not guess there was any connection between himself and the other couple.

More Champagne

Hyslop began to drink champagne and soon began to get drunk on it. Perhaps a little quicker than people usually do, but no one could know how much, or how little, drink he had had before his arrival. Vic also, toward the end of the meal was giggling loudly at nothing in particular. Glancing up covertly, Jimmie saw to his relief that the fair-haired spy was now merely displaying scornful amusement. Monsieur Villon, however, on his occasional visits to the upper room was looking worried.

Hyslop ordered a second double brandy after coffee and Jimmie observed him pour it away behind a radiator. Vic's arm lay on the table and Hyslop was fondling it in maudlin fashion. Jimmie had never seen such perfect acting. At moments he could hardly believe that all this had been concocted that evening in the lounge of the Grand Cross hotel.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

IT was cold yesterday which was Sunday, and when I had Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth and got my work done and fed my face I told my ant that she ought to be careful how she washed a fella on a cold day because he might ketch cold and then she would be sorry. And she wanted to know where I got that idee. I said that lots of people caught cold from getting wet, and she said she knowed that, but what she didn't know was where I got the idee that she would be sorry. I asted her if she wouldn't be sorry if a little boy's ghost came every night and sot up on the foot of her bed and looked at her, and she said if she was going to have a ghost she would see that it would be a clean one. So then she shampoodle me extra, and when I asted him if he had a ant which shampoodle him when he was little my father wanted to know why I asted him that, and I said I was trying to find out how he got so bald-headed, and he said he got that way losing his hair.

Feeble and Tommies and Moggie came then and I was as ashamed as I could be, because my arms were out of my shirt and it was hanging down so that I was nekked to my waist. They all stood around and watched my ant scrubbing me and asting me if I wasn't afraid my face would freeze that way when I would get soap in my eyes, and Feeble asted my ant if she didn't want her to go find her a handful of sand to put on the washrag, and then my ant turned me around and Feeble hollered, "Oh, look at the two freckles on his chest. You ought to do something for your complexion, Thmas Aristides," and just then my ant dropped the washrag into the basin and reached for the towel, and before anyone could bat an eye I had the wash-rag out and plastered it all over Feeble's face, and it went in her eyes and mouth and everything and ran down on her Sunday school dress, and she went around the kitchen spitting and wiping her tongue on her handkerchief, and that settled her.

This morning, which was Monday, they were over before school, and Feeble said her mother had been reading to her about Cleopatra, and it made her think of how my mother looked in her new coat, and she said my mother looked like a regular devil when she got that coat on, and my mother went and put it on and pulled it tight across her bussel and walked around the dining room table and looked at herself in the looking glass. And I told Feeble on the way to school that if she didn't let my mother alone she would be sorry. And she said to mind my own business, because my mother had a right to be happy once in a while.

Publisher Will Hop 19,000 Air Miles

NEW YORK, Jan. 20—Doing his bit to make the world air-minded, William J. Gannett, 76, retired Maine publisher, will take off from Miami Jan. 21 on a 19,000-mile air journey around South America.

He will visit 21 countries with seventeen days of actual flying time, flying over established air lines or lines which will be established by the time he gets to them. He plans to land back in Miami April 1. The extra time not spent in flying he will have for side trips to interesting points.

A veteran of 23 years of air travel—he made his first balloon ascent at Pittsfield, Mass., in 1907—Mr. Gannett sees nothing particularly unusual in his trip, which is probably the longest single journey ever scheduled by a passenger over regular air routes.

He has traveled over nearly all the established European air lines and has made a 6,000-mile air trip around this country and numerous shorter trips.

Love's Reawakening

The Story of a Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

BY ADELE GARRISON

Loaded Revolver Threatens To Start Old Quarrel

DICKY'S frown and the chilly, offended tone with which he instructed his reply to my request that he unload his revolver before putting it away, sent my memory flashing back to a memorable and unpleasant controversy we had had upon the subject when we first came to the farmhouse. I had contended that with Junior toddling around and meddling in everything he found it was dangerous to have a loaded gun in the house. Dicky had laughed at my fears, and when I persisted, had become highly offended at my lack of belief in his caution in keeping the weapon so well concealed that Junior never could find it.

"Do I look like the half wits who leave loaded revolvers around in bureau drawers and writing desks?" he had demanded hotly at one stage of the argument. "Please give me credit for having an ounce or two of brains."

It had been an angry controversy, one which left bitterness behind it because of the rancor we both had displayed, and the unpleasant things prompted by temper which we had uttered. The outcome of it all had been the building of the wall safe, a suggestion of my father's who had arrived on an unexpected visit while the discussion was in progress — it had been a long drawn out affair of several days—and to my surprised chagrin had sided with Dicky.

"Ours is not an ordinary household, my darling," he said to me privately. "Because of my work and that of Mrs. Underwood when she is here, we are never free from a possibility of something arising which may necessitate one of us using a weapon. But I am sure Richard will take all possible precautions against Junior's even seeing it. And with this wall safe plan, he will never know where it is kept even if he should happen to see it in his father's hands in some emergency."

The wall safe had been built, and the subject dropped. And now years later, it had come up again with more quarrelsome possibilities than ever.

Madge Capitulates

I was resentfully annoyed at Dicky's tone and black look but those were not the cause of the sudden stiffening of my body, and the angry throwing back of my head in preparation for conflict. It was the premonitory fear of something terribly hovering over me, a fear that I fancy comes often to mothers when the safety of their children is involved, which made me forget all the promises of "keeping the peace" which I had made to myself at the beginning of my second honeymoon.

"Yes, I am going to begin all that again," I told him, and my tone was as chilly as his own had been when he had put the query to me, "I deferred to your judgment and father's years ago when this question first came up——"

"You mean you deferred to father's," Dicky said. "Anything I said never had any weight with you."

There was something in his tone, a spirit of grieved boyishness sullenness underneath his rancor which suddenly caught at my heart, and robbed me of any further strength to combat him. What was I doing? I asked myself, suddenly, as I realized that we were on the brink of one of our old searing quarrels, and over something which had been settled years ago. Against the common sense which told me that Dicky was right, I had only an emotional and baseless premonition.

With sudden determination I crossed the room and put my hand on his arm.

Did the Boys Overhear?

"That's the most foolish thing you ever said", I told him, trying to make my tone gay. "And to prove it, I'll tell you right now that I'm letting your present dictum weigh several pounds with me. Do as you please about the revolver. I won't say anything more about it."

His face cleared and he kissed me fondly.

"If I didn't believe," he began unctuously, then put a crisp question: "What was the reason for the sudden demand the advent of the Harrison boys?"

"I suppose that really lay behind it," I said. "But, it really was one of my premonitions." I brought the word hesitantly, for Dicky many times has jested good-naturedly at my fancies.

But this time he checked his amused smile at his eyes. It never reached his lips. Instead he bent and kissed me.

"Poor, little girl," he said tenderly. "Honestly, Madge, if I didn't know I was right about this, I'd throw the darned thing into the rubbish heap. For I'll just as soon have no gun as an unloaded one. But, I've just got to be firm about this and keep it the way I always have done. But you may be sure, I'll be extra careful to keep it locked away while our visitors are here. What's the matter?"

For I had stiffened in his arms with abrupt fright. Dicky's back was to the door while I, looking across his shoulder, saw suddenly what in our absorption we had not noticed that we had not latched the door securely when we had come in. It was partly ajar and just outside the doorway stood the small figures of Junior and Roderick.

Has the laxative in your home a family doctor's approval?

MOST of us value our health too much to purposely neglect ourselves when we are warned of constipation by bad breath, feverishness, biliousness, a headache, lack of appetite, or that weak, helpless feeling. The continuation of our trouble is more often due to the things we do rather than the things we leave undone.

Some things people do to help the bowels really weaken these organs. Only a doctor knows what things will cleanse the system without harm. That's why the laxative in your home should have a family doctor's approval.

A wonderful product now known to millions of people as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a family doctor's prescription for sluggish bowels. It never varies from the original prescription which Dr. Caldwell wrote thousands of times in his many years of practice at Monticello, Illinois. He proved it safe and reliable for women and children; thoroughly effective for the most robust men. He showed it actually corrects constipation. It is made from fresh herbs and other pure ingredients.

Since Dr. Caldwell first permitted his prescription to be put up in bottles and sold through drug stores, it has increased steadily in popularity until today it is the largest selling laxative in the world!
